Midnight.js is a useful jQuery plugin created by AeroLab for websites that are scrolling or have a parallax effect. If have a fixed logo or navigation you have the power to coordinate with the background color of the new section you scroll into as you scroll down the page.

I chose this plugin because scrolling websites are a popular trend right now in the web world because they can be mobile friendly. As opposed to navigating through multiple pages like on a regular desktop, scrolling websites can decrease the load time on a mobile device by making your content all in one page.

As a web designer/developer, I think Midnight.js is a neat tool to have under your belt when you want to further your design more in regards to fixed headers.
